Re: Public Comment to Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, "Prediction Markets," RIN 3038-AF65

Prediction Markets Report is a media platform that analyzes the legal, economic, and policy developments relating to the prediction market industry and writes in support of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission's ("CFTC") continued oversight of prediction markets.

The CFTC is uniquely positioned to promote the integrity, resilience, and vibrancy of novel derivatives products through sound regulation as part of the broad authority granted to it by Congress under the Commodity Exchange Act ("CEA"). This includes prediction markets. The CEA's expansive scope reflects a deliberate effort to ensure that emerging products fall within the CFTC's exclusive jurisdiction where appropriate; event contracts are no different.

The Commission's commitment to clear, forward-looking guidance is constructive and effective. The shift away from regulation by enforcement and back to the principles-based approach that is the backbone of the CFTC's regulatory framework should be applauded.
